The conventional management of immediate post-catheterization bleeding in the suprapubic region is digital pressure. This is not always successful, and alternative methods need to be identified. The aim of this study was to assess the efficacy of ligation of the obturator vein in the management of post-catheterization bleeding. Between 1996 and 2003, patients who presented with post-catheterization bleeding in the suprapubic region, with or without haemodynamic instability, and were referred for surgical intervention (ligation of the obturator vein) were identified. Demographic data, catheterization details, clinical parameters and outcome were reviewed. Sixty-eight patients were identified with a median age of 59 (range 30-82) years and a median estimated blood loss of 50 mL. Post-catheterization bleeding was angiocatheter-related in 95% of cases, and after the first
